

CANADIAN Products Made Without Pork (Porcine) Enzymes

The information provided pertains only to products made and distributed in Canada. Products sold in other countries under similar brands may be made using slightly different recipes and ingredients to accommodate local needs and preferences.

Enzymes are occasionally used to produce a wide variety of food products. For example, most cheese is made using enzymes to help develop unique flavours. The enzymes used may come from vegetable, microbial and/or animal sources, depending on the particular cheese flavour being developed. Animal enzymes that are derived from pork (also called “porcine enzymes”) are used to develop the cheese in some of our cheese seasonings.

For those in Canada choosing to restrict pork-related ingredients from their diets, following are some Frito Lay Canada snacks that do not contain pork enzymes. If you do not see your favourite Frito Lay Canada snack on this list, please feel free to contact our Consumer Relations Centre for information. Another guide that may be helpful is the list of Kosher products, which may also be found on this website.
